

best friend of Miss Olson's, Dr. Hiltner, rushed over to the house, but it was apparent that Miss Olson had been dead for about an hour or an hour and a half. Detectives of the Bubbling Well Station were on the scene immediately after the report of the crime and undertook a thorough investigation. They were subsequently joined by detectives from the Gordon Road Station and members of the Criminal Investigation Department. Practically the entire detective force of the Settlement was engaged in working on the case last night but up to a late hour no arrests had been made.

When the body was found, neither of the two servants who had just started to work for Miss Olson were in the house. Their whereabouts are unknown.

It is known that Miss Olson had had trouble with her previous servant, a cook-lady. On Tuesday night, she had given him notice that he would be discharged on the first of next month but he is said to have replied that he would leave immediately.

Conditions at the house indicated that Miss Olson had been summoned to the rear door of the house. There, apparently, her assailant had struck the first blow, as indicated by the pool of blood. Then, she either ran to the bathroom and attempted ineffectually to lock herself in order to avoid her assailant, or was dragged there by him and beaten to death. The house sets in a considerable distance from the road, and no alarm was heard by neighbors or passersby.

Miss Olson's body was removed to the Mortuary. An inquest was started by the Danish consular authorities and will probably be continued today.

Dr. Sellett Speaks At Tiffin Meeting Of Y. Men's Club

Law Students To Play Big Role In China, He Asserts

The law students of China will play an important part in the abolition of extraterritoriality, said Dr. George Sellett at a meeting of the Y. Men's Club of Shanghai last Monday, at the Carlton Cafe. He said this opinion because the future judges of the country will be chosen from among their number and the administration of the law will be in their hands.

Dr. Sellett, Acting Dean of the Comparative Law School of China, a department of Soochow University, was the guest of honor at the Club's weekly tiffin at which Mr. W. Yimoon Lee presided.

In the course of his address Dr. Sellett said that Peking University established the first modern law school in China in 1905 for the purpose of training young men for responsible official positions requiring legal knowledge. In 1916 Soochow University opened its law school with 8 students and now has over 100. It is the only school teaching common law in China and the faculty is composed entirely of members of the Shanghai bar, all of whom are lawyers in actual practice in this city.

Speaking of the ancient criminal law of China, Dr. Sellett stated that it was older than the old Roman Law, but was unsuitable to present-day conditions. The new criminal law has already been codified and passed, it being based upon the Japanese law which was copied from Germany. Apart from the criminal law China should either adopt the continental civil law or the common law of England and America because Chinese law is not applicable to modern business conditions. It being based upon ancient customs and usage, being out of date. It was up to the Chinese law makers to determine which was best for their country—the civil or common law—and from present indications, notwithstanding chaos in other directions, it will not be long before a decision will be arrived at for the adoption of one or the other for the general use of the country.

"Some people say I'm a 'nut', he added succinctly, by way of conclusion. "Yet, fifteen years ago if anyone had said to you that today you would be listening to a voice hundreds of thousands of miles away, without even the aid of wires to bring the voice to your ears, you would have said that person was a 'nut' and the whole project preposterous. Perhaps who knows?—in fifty, one hundred or maybe a thousand years from today, the people who scoff at my ideas and call me a 'nut' will (if they are alive or in a place where they can keep track of the news of the day) be forced to admit that maybe that fellow meaning me, had a good idea after all."

Other news headlines were followed by the news items. Mr. John Boyington was introduced to his unseen audience and proceeded to instruct them, humorously and skillfully, in his dance theories. "New moods for old" was the motif of his talk. He described himself as a "psychology engineer" and gave detailed instructions in building up the old worn-out engine of bad moods in the body and making oneself over into a perfectly-running machine of highest efficiency. His talk was interspersed with many humorous references to his audience which he pretended he could see going through the calisthenics he was prescribing.

PRICELESS ANTIQUES LOST IN FIRE

GREEN VALLEY MANOR.
The century-old Green Valley Manor, near Washington, one of Virginia's ancestral landmarks, has been destroyed by fire. Among the heirlooms and relics lost were a Chinese lamp 2,000 years old, a serving table once used by Marie Antoinette, and others. Four naval officers living in the manor escaped with serious burns. The manor was used as a hospital during the Civil War.

now given as many matters had first to be adjusted.

It was impossible to say much about the convention, for its duties and scope would be entirely determined by the first conference. He could not say whether Marshal Chang Tso-lin, Dr. Sun Yat-sen and General Feng Yu-hsiang would personally attend, but otherwise their responsible representatives would be there.

Asked what he thought of the Protocol Powers' recent note, Marshal Tuan said that he yesterday gave instructions to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to draft a reply, which would be known in due course. He had also given instructions that the Lin-cheng demands be settled as soon as possible. It was regrettable that this affair had been allowed to drag on so long.

POSITION IMPROVING

The position in China generally was steadily improving, and the situation in the Yangtze Valley showed progress daily. He was grieved to learn of the Kalgan looting. General Chang Chih-chiang with two brigades had been sent to Kalgan as a punitive force.

He was pleased to state that he had received a telegram announcing the release of the Norwegian missionary Ande on December 15.

Having offered the portfolio of Foreign Affairs to Mr. Tang Shao-yi, the Government were now waiting to see whether Mr. Tang would accept this post. Meanwhile, no other appointment was likely, Marshal Tuan concluded.

The Marshal was looking stronger and more confident than at Tientsin. He seems quite contented with the way things are going.

First-hand information, obtained from police headquarters before dawn last evening on the gruesome murder of Miss Maren Olson, well-known local nurse, full details of which will be found in another part of the paper, was given to the people listening in on the radio.

Chinese Stowaways Are Discovered On Str. Pres. Van Buren

27 Are Taken Off Dollar World Liner At Boston

(Reuter's Service)

Boston, Nov. 20.—Twenty seven Chinese stowaways were taken off the steamship President Van Buren today as the vessel left for New York, continuing a round the world voyage. They were held at immigration headquarters and it was said would be returned to China on the steamship M. S. Dollar which is due here next week.

Officers of the President Van Buren said they had come aboard at Shanghai. They were discovered soon after the vessel sailed and put to work as members of the crew, but at Singapore the United States Consul refused to certify them as belonging to the ship's company. It was announced that immigration officials are conducting an investigation of the incident.

Dr. Fearn, Reads Original Story At Short Story Meeting

Dr. Anne Walter Fearn is well-known in Shanghai as a raconteur; few of the hundreds of people in Shanghai who know Dr. Fearn or who have heard her tell her "funny" stories in her inimitable manner have guessed that she is, besides, a writer of fiction. Dr. Fearn made her debut as a short story writer last evening when she read "The Hospital Mop," a story of humor and sentiment, written by herself, before a large gathering at the regular monthly meeting of the Shanghai Short Story Club which was held in her home, 20 Route Pichon, last night.

There were many guests present, including Mr. H. Holgate, acting president of the Shanghai Rotary Club, Mr. and Mrs. John Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fitch, who have recently returned from a year's trip abroad, Mrs. Calder Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Lust, and others.

After Dr. Fearn read her story she told some "including" her favorites and many new ones which she garnered on her recent trip to the coast. Guy C. Stockton and Rex C. M. Drury also read original fiction stories. Mr. Stockton's story, was titled "The Honorable Amah" and Reverend Drury's was "In Love With His Sister." The next meeting of the Short Story Club will be held at the American School on January 19.

Dr. Schurman, In Address At Union Club, Outlines American Policy On China

 Pei-fu or any other Chinese military and navy would be.

ADDRESS IN FULL
 The address substantially as delivered follows:

"It is exactly four months since I left Shanghai. In the interval there has been fighting in your neighborhood, and still more in the distant north. These hostilities repeat in a general way the hostilities of the Spring of 1922, with the same leaders though on a different theater and with the defeated party of 1922 the victorious party of 1925.

"I have read in the newspapers since I came back to Asia that the American Government and people have favored this or that leader or faction. I wish I could make all the Chinese newspaper writers and readers and especially the Chinese public realize how utterly baseless and false that statement is. To anyone like myself, fresh from America, the charge is impressive, not merely by its magnitude but its absurdity. There is no American interest or policy associated in any special way with any particular Chinese leader or party, and there never has been. No propaganda more ridiculous than this Cock-and-Bull story of American sympathy and support to this or that militarist has ever been in the press.

ABSURD PROPAGANDA

"I regret to observe that Dr. Sun Yat-sen has lent the weight of his name to this absurd propaganda. He gave an interview recently in Kobe to a representative of the Japan Chronicle, the report of which is contained in the Weekly Edition of that paper of December 11.

"In that interview Dr. Sun blames the foreign powers for China's troubles, and makes no exception in respect of America. He says that 'The foreign Governments' made a loan of two hundred and fifty million dollars to Yuan Shih-kai to help him overthrow the revolutionary influence in China. He adds that if the powers had not given such support, China would have had no trouble and there would have been no Monarchy movement. Dr. Sun ought to have stated that America had no part in the loan referred to but instead of this supporting the actual facts, Dr. Sun goes on to make another charge against certain powers, including America, which is equally void of foundation. He says:

"They (the Powers) had chosen Wu Pei-fu as their 'Strong Man' and had given support to him. Britain and America had officially proposed to Japan to support Wu. What would the British people think if the Chinese would say to them 'Hail to your Strong Man, Hail to your ruler'. What would the Americans say if outsiders tried to force them to accept Pei-fu as their ruler.

REPLY TO DR. SUN
 "I have already stated in connection with these allegations of Dr. Sun's that neither the American Government nor the American people had anything to do with the loan to Yuan Shih-kai. I now add most emphatically that the statement that America had officially proposed to Japan to support Wu is absolutely false. Neither the American people, or the American Government nor any representative of the American Government has ever expressed any preference as to the leaders who should undertake the government of China. Just as, to use the analogy of Dr. Sun, it would be unpardonable for the Chinese Government to recommend Pershing as the ruler of America, so the American Government would have regarded it as equally unpardonable to make any recommendations or suggestions to the people of China with respect to a candidate to govern the Chinese nation. Throughout the entire history of the relations between the two Governments and peoples, the American Government has always laid down and acted upon the principle that it would not in any way interfere or mix itself up in the domestic affairs of China.

AMERICA'S POLICY

"What then, is the policy of the United States in regard to China? I am glad to have the opportunity of explaining it as I have already done so often and in so many different provinces of the Republic of China.

"The fundamental policy of the American people and Government, is one of Sympathy and Friendship, and Disinterested Helpfulness to the Chinese people. America does not possess and does not desire one foot of Chinese territory, either as a permanent possession or in temporary tenure. It has always been, and it is today, the earnest desire of the American people and Government to see China the unqualified mistress of her own domains. The territorial integrity of China and the administrative Sovereignty rights of the Chinese nation are cardinal positions of America's policy with respect to China. In the second place the American people and the American Government desire no special concession or privileges in China. Doctor Sun states in the speech already referred to that 'Foreigners can claim fairly the right to trade with the Chinese people, and to preach Christianity'. This is America's policy of the Open Door, and in this connection America asks for nothing more. Thirdly, I should mention what of course is axiomatic among a highly civilized people like the Chinese—that the rights which are guaranteed to the American Government and the American people by solemn treaty with China cannot be violated so long as those treaties remain unmodified. This scarcely needs to be stated among people who have such a high regard for justice as the Chinese and who have always recognized the obligations imposed upon them both by treaties and the fundamentals of International law.

"No country can be a member of the family of Nations in which such obligations are not specifically recognized, acted upon and enforced.

HOPE FOR FUTURE
 "It is, and always has been, the earnest hope of the American people that China should achieve full and complete independence as a Sovereign Nation. It would be to ignore facts, not to recognize that at the present time there are restrictions upon her sovereignty, imposed by her treaties with foreign nations. The American people believe that the Chinese people are capable of setting up and maintaining a Government which will render these restrictions, which have been devised for the protection of foreign lives and property, gradually unnecessary. It is impossible to exaggerate America's hopes and expectations with regard to China. My people are impressed with the vast extent of Chinese territory, with the magnitude of the resources of the country, and with the great members of the Chinese population which now embraces one-fourth of the entire population of the globe.

"This great people has also, in the course of a history of thousands of years, achieved a high and noble civilization, a civilization inferior to none in the Western World from the days of Ancient Greece until the present moment. In agriculture, in trade, in all ordinary industries, China has also occupied a leading position in human history. The record of her Government, which extends over a period of thousands of years, is unmatched in history. Within the last dozen years she has undertaken to change fundamentally that system of Government and that she has not been successful in so short a period of time should not surprise us. The American people cherish an unquenchable faith that the Chinese people, who have been so successful in all other fields of activity, and have had a workable Imperial system of Government for so many centuries, will in time develop a successful system of Republican Government. Just as soon as the Chinese Government rests on a stable basis and embraces the entire country, America hopes that it will undertake to exercise also those functions of Government which by the terms of the treaties now devolve upon foreigners.

EXTRA TERRITORIALITY

"One of the privileges enjoyed by foreign Governments is extra territoriality," continued Dr. Schurman. "I believe it is generally recognized that the privilege should in time be surrendered. In determining the time the American Government has assumed an evolutionary development. Our idea is that the repeal of extra territoriality should come with the establishing of a stable and effective Chinese Government exercising jurisdiction over the provinces of China generally. The abandonment of extra territoriality also implies the existence of rules of law, of courts for the enforcement of these laws, and of a judicial practice in the presence of which foreigners may gain equal treatment with Chinese.

COMMISSION OF JURISTS

"The Washington Conference among the other important benefits it conferred on China, provided for the creation of a Commission of International Jurists, who should come to China and in conjunction with the Chinese Government investigate the conditions under which extra territoriality might be abandoned and to recommend the manner, gradually or otherwise, in which this change should be effected. The meeting of this Commission of Jurists was at first delayed at the request of the Chinese Government themselves. However, that the time is now approaching for this Commission to meet and the Government of the United States in a spirit of helpfulness to China, is desirous that the Commission should be convened at the earliest practicable date. The resolution on this subject adopted by the Washington conference is final. It does not have to await ratification by the Governments of the powers represented at the conference. All that is needed is that the Governments should appoint their representatives and that the jurists should come to China and undertake the investigation with which they are charged by the Washington Conference.

CHINESE CUSTOM TARIFF

"The Washington Conference also provided for the meeting in China of a 'Special Conference' to levy a sur-tax of 2½ percent on the Chinese Maritime Customs. The treaty in which this was embodied has not yet been ratified by all of the powers, and so the meeting of this special conference has been delayed. It is, however, the earnest hope of the American Government that that treaty may speedily be ratified by all of the Governments, and that the meeting of the special conference to levy the sur-tax may be held in the very near future. The American Government realized that the Government of China needs additional funds, and as China under the restrictions of the treaties, cannot now levy her own customs tariff, the American Government feels that she should receive an increase of the tariff at the hands of the treaty powers.

"I have already said that there is a demand in China for the immediate abolishment of extra territoriality. It will not have escaped your attention that there is also a demand in China for complete tariff autonomy. At the present time these demands are somewhat revolutionary and the American Government favors in both cases a policy of evolution. That evolutionary policy was expressed at the Washington conference, in the form of resolutions and treaties. In the opinion of the American Government the date of the meeting of the Commission of Jurists to investigate the subject of extra-territoriality, and the date for the meeting of the special conference to levy the customs surtax should not be long postponed. Nothing could contribute more effectively to that consummation than the establishment in China of a government commensurate itself to foreign nations by its stability, effectiveness, and comprehensive jurisdiction.

GUEST AT LUNCHEON

At luncheon yesterday held in the American Club and attended by the committees of various American organizations, Dr. Schurman told of the recent election in the United States and explained the underlying principles of the three parties. In referring to President Coolidge, the American Minister stated that the Chief Executive has captured the imagination and admiration of the American people in a way that is difficult of realization for one not a resident of the home land. He predicted a period of prosperity for the United States for the next few years and said that the only disturbing element is discontent existing among the farmers.

In referring to the problems of the farmers, he stated that it was interesting to observe that the farmers are now taking an active interest in foreign affairs, especially in American relations toward Europe, and that the recent activity of the United States in respect to the settlement of the German Reparations Problem was partly as a result of the interest displayed in this subject by the American farmers. Dr. Schurman said that he had been in Shanghai last night by boat, for the Tientsin route to Peking.

PTE. PARRY GETS NEW RECORD IN 'B' CO.'S RIFLE MEET

Makes 191 Points Of Possible
195 In Annual Event
Here Sunday

The Annual Rifle meeting of "B" Company British, S. V. C., took place on Sunday last. Weather conditions were favorable and some excellent scores were made. A Corps record was established by Pte. T. S. Parry, who made 191 points out of a possible 195 in the Trained Men's Course.

The T. M. C.'s comprising various ranges and conditions makes Parry's successful exhibition of what can be done little short of the miraculous, and Colonel Gordon has signified his intention of presenting Parry with another Cup to mark this occasion.

Colonel Gordon, Colonel Trueman, and the Headquarters Staff were among the guests present. In the course of his remarks Colonel Gordon commented on the Company's being in the position of a British unit in the Corps, and he looked to the members to uphold British traditions and carry on the good work which was being done.

Colonel Trueman, one of the oldest members of the unit gave an interesting account of the formation of the Company and its subsequent progress.

Lieut. Divers, O. C. Company, spoke on the good work being done by the members and the good feeling which existed between all ranks. The attendance of over 90 percent at this meeting, the good scores registered, and the work carried out in the recent "call-to-arms" showed that the settlement could rely on the Company at any time, and the Company's motto "Always Ready" was a good rallying call.

Brigadier-General MacNaughten had kindly presented a very fine cup from the B. A. T. Parry, a member of the B. A. T. staff.

The results were as follows:

(1) Pte. Parry, (2) Cpl. J. Main, (3) Pte. T. J. Evans.

HOLES-IN-ONE ON KIANGWAN COURSE MAKE SENSATION

Two In One Day Given Shanghai Real Place On World's Golfing Map

Shanghai golfing will soon be come world-famous of it has many more days like last Sunday at Kiangwan, when two holes-in-one were made, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, of 231 and 154 yards respectively. Next to the record of two holes-in-one out of three holes, which was made by a golfer little known to fame a few years ago, a record of two holes-in-one in one day on the same course is quite remarkable, and is something very rarely achieved. There are probably not five golf courses in the world which can show such a record.

Sunday's holes-in-one were made by Mr. Gater and Mr. Seth. Mr. W. Gater made it in his match in the morning with Mr. C. G. Oakes, on the fourth hole, 237 yards being the distance. Mr. S. A. Seth made his in the afternoon, in a foursome match in which he was paired with Mr. Orwin against Messrs. J. B. and Fraser Ferrier, on the seventeenth hole, which is however only 154 yards.

In addition to this remarkable record, the official Kiangwan course record was beaten last Sunday by Mr. J. B. Ferrier, who made the eighteen holes in 69, one stroke lower than the official record made by himself, and one over the unofficial figure set by Mr. Blinks. The record, it is interesting to note, was made in the same foursome as that in which Mr. Seth made his hole-in-one.

So Kiangwan is on the world's golfing map, or is going to be as soon as the story gets abroad. Fortunately, there are a number of vacation witnesses to the play. Congratulations to the new members of the exclusive "Hole-In-One Club," as well as to Mr. Ferrier.

Shanghai Hockey Club Plays "B" Team Portuguese

In the third week of League Hockey play, the Shanghai Hockey Club will meet the Portuguese "B" team on the Shanghai Cricket Club ground next Saturday, the 20th instant, at 3 p.m. Mr. A. G. Wallis will referee.

The Shanghai Hockey Club will be represented by: Messrs. J. P. Jones, W. V. B. Hughes and M. Tegetmeier, H. J. Paers, W. S. Harvie and D. C. Burn; E. J. V. Baumgartner, J. R. Huxley, R. C. Allen, M. E. Columbine, and N. Richardson. Reserves: Mr. A. S. H. Thompson and Mr. H. J. Gwyther.

Football At St. Ignatius

Last Sunday, December 16, the St. Ignatius College Football team defeated by 2 to 1 the first team of the Jewish R. C. After twenty minutes the center forward of St. Ignatius kicked the ball, which touched a defense and then the net. A long and hard shot from the same leaving no chance to the keeper, scored a second point before the end of the first half.

After the interval the Jews attacked strongly, and scored once during a scrimmage in front of their adversaries' goal. The whole match was very interesting and friendly, the ball going equally all over the ground.

Also on Sunday, St. Ignatius' second team lost a rather weak game to the Italian Marine eleven by a score of 2 to 1.

On December 11, St. Ignatius won a friendly match against Medhurst College on its ground, the score being 3 to 1. St. Ignatius scored first on a penalty. Tzu Se-mou, the center forward, scored the two other goals for the team after fine passes from the right wing.

Shanghai Community Chorus In Christmas Songs At Town Hall

With all the wonderful range of tone and rhythm which the development of instrumental music throughout the ages has brought, nothing has yet been devised which is deeper, more melodious, more beautiful, than the human voice, particularly heard en masse. This is the thought which was particularly impressed upon the sensitive listener at Tuesday's general rehearsal of the Shanghai Community Chorus, the superb choir which Mr. L. C. Perry has created with young Chinese men and women here. The wonderful volume of melody from these hundreds of young voices, poured out in all the beauty of the glorious Christmas carols, goes deep into the heart and moves and thrills as can no instrument and no orchestra, carrying all before it like a surging flood.

Tuesday, however, was only a rehearsal. But it included the Christmas songs which will be sung by the Chorus next week in their two concerts at the Town Hall. "In a Stable Lowly," "The Birthday of a King," "A Joyous Christmas Song," were all beautiful, but in music more than anything else our feelings are blended with our memories, and the glorious "Come all ye faithful" led up to the melody starting "Sing O Heavens," goes deeper than other themes, and the same may also be said of "Holy Night, Silent Night," the matchless beauty of which has already silenced and awed generations of men and women, Christian and pagan, by its sheer magnificence.

The Community Chorus was formed four years ago, Mr. L. C. Perry being its Director and doing wonderful work with these young Chinese people who have so mastered European melodies and English words. These singers are from various schools and colleges in and around Shanghai, and they practice and rehearse separately in the autumn, also under Mr. Perry, coming together for three general rehearsals before their final performances. This year there are two new pieces included in their repertoire, "In a Stable

Lowly" and "A Joyous Christmas Song."

The concerts at the Town Hall next week will be on Monday and Tuesday, December 22 and 23, at 8.00 p.m., and the Municipal Orchestra will accompany the singers. The program will be as follows:

- Part I—1. Overture, "Son and Stranger" (Mendelssohn) Orchestra
2. "The Birthday of a King."
3. a. "Le Sommeil de l'Enfant Jesus."

c. "The First Nowell."
4. "In a Stable Lowly."
Part II—1. Largo from Symphony No. 2, D. Major (Beethoven) Orchestra
2. a. "O Bienheureuse Nuit."
b. "Silent Night."
c. "O Holy Night."
3. "A Joyous Christmas Song."
4. "Sing O Heavens."

Wusih Magistrate Seeks To Quit But Is Held By Gentry

(China Press Correspondence) Wusih, Ku, December 16.

The magistrate of this district who is an appointee of General Chi Hsieh-yuan is reported to be most desirous of leaving his post. He has made several attempts to leave for Nanking but the local gentry are detaining him and not permitting him to leave until another man is appointed to take his place. The reason for this is said to be that there is no one here at present who is competent to issue receipts for the balance of the district funds that are in the present magistrates' hands. The gentry it is reported more than suspect that this is the reason that the magistrate wishes to go without waiting for a proper permission from the governor and a duly appointed successor. It is thought that he has decided to follow his patron, Chi Hsieh-yuan, into retirement.

Four men were executed here yesterday. They had been convicted of being members of the armed band of forty men who raided and robbed a country town near here three weeks ago, as reported in the "China Press" at the time.

Sir Gilbert Parker Sees Good Results From Dawes Scheme

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Brussels, Dec. 16.—In the course of an interview Sir Gilbert Parker declared that the situation resulting from the execution of the Dawes plan augured well as all the machinery provided for the execution of the plan had been instituted; the payments were being effected regularly and there was reason to believe that the Dawes plan would be carried out. He added that if the Paris conference came to a reasonable and just understanding it would be able to help considerably in the realization of the plan. Sir Gilbert Parker left for Paris where the meeting of the Transfers Committee will be held on Wednesday.

Here you will find a replica of the famous old Bohemian Cafe of San Francisco, the place where the poet and peasant, the rich and poor, the banker and bricklayer all met as one, and where, over their plates of steaming spaghetti, they told their tales of conquests or drowned their sorrows with a glass of ruby wine.

Tonight we will endeavor to take you back to a carnival at Sanguinetti's, and to help you enjoy, once more a few hours in old San Francisco: We will go back to that saw-dust covered floor, to that spicy smell of garlic and to the clink of glasses; where, under the dimlights you will beat time to some popular Italian tune.

News Brevities

According to a message from Peking received by a local organization yesterday Dr. Sun Yat-sen, head of the Kuomintang, is still ill in Tientsin but will probably proceed to Peking in about a week.

Everything is quiet in the capital, the message says, and Tuan Chi-jui, chief executive, is in excellent health. The recent reports of his flight from the capital are entirely rumor, and without foundation, the message adds.

Owing to lack of popular interest and support the Community Christmas Tree and Pageant which heretofore has been presented on Christmas Eve by the American Women's Club will not be given on December 24 as originally planned.

The meeting of the Civic Department scheduled for December 24 has been changed to Saturday morning at 10:30, December 20th. At this meeting important business will be transacted relative to the usual philanthropic work of the Department at Christmas time. It is hoped that a full attendance of this Department may be present.

In the advertisement of Laou Kiu Chwang and Co., which appeared yesterday a paper error in the address occurred. Instead of P120 it should have been P128 Nanking Road.

Major Arthur Bassett of the British-American Tobacco Company returned to Shanghai yesterday after a business trip to Tientsin and Peking.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen will stay in Peking at the Shui Wu Chu or Customs Board in the Hai Tang Tea Hutong off Morrison Street, and not at Dr. Wellington Koo's house as reported in some of the newspapers.

The sudden departure from Peking of General Chang Hsueh-liang interrupted the painting of one of the most interesting portraits of the year. Mrs. Jacobs, the noted artist, had a canvas of the young Manchurian Commander in hand.

Peking has received an access of social strength from the arrival of M. and Mme. Berthelot of the Russo-Asiatic Bank. Both are old Pekingites. Mme. Berthelot being a daughter of M. Padoux, legal adviser to the Chinese Government.

Mr. Harry J. Mondorf, the world touring representative of the Keith theatrical organization, who passed through Hongkong last year in search of talent, succeeded in discovering in Java two Balinese temple dancers. These two, Takka Takka and her husband Yoga Taro, made their debut at the New York Hippodrome on October 27 and are reported to have created a furore with dances which are "like nothing else ever seen in the terpsichorean line."

The High Court at Allahabad has confirmed the sentence of four years' imprisonment passed on each of two accused charged with conspiring with Bolsheviks in Moscow to spread sedition in India. The case disclosed an attempt to foment armed rebellion in India and that money had been remitted to India from Europe for this purpose. It was also disclosed that the transactions were carried on through the medium of organizations which had an Indian agent at Berlin. The Court warmly complimented the Criminal Investigation Department and its chief on their services.

The youngest man at the head of any great newspaper is Walter Lipmann, the erstwhile assistant editor of "The New Republic" who is now the Editor of "The New York World" at the age of 32. Walter Lipmann is a brilliant writer himself whose wit and irony are widely known.

According to the Chinese press, Marshal Wu Pei-fu is furnishing Tachun Hsiao Yao-nan with a very difficult proposition through his determined refusal either to live within the foreign concessions or to proceed to Europe or America. Wu Pei-fu, although more friendly to the foreigner than Dr. Sun Yat-sen, apparently has no desire to presume upon the protection and hospitality which the concessions offer at awkward moments.

Metal hat ornaments inscribed with weird hieroglyphics have become very fashionable in London, but need care in choosing. For instance, one woman has given up the fashion because she learnt that the ornament she had been wearing for weeks bore the inscription, in Chinese, "To be let or sold."

The Chinese press reports that a sum of $100,000 will be offered to Marshal Wu Pei-fu for his travelling expenses abroad. Tachun Hsiao will contribute $20,000, the commander of the 25th Division $10,000, while the remaining $70,000 will be presented by the Hupoh Provincial Assembly.

There is a Society for the Prevention of Travel Accidents in Japan, and as a result of its studies it has come to the conclusion that the fact that there are a large number of motor accidents when women are in the car is due to the fact that the chauffeurs pay too much attention to the dangers behind them and not enough to those in front.

The loss of a baby's rattle has been reported to Scotland Yard. The baby had the rattle during a taxi cab drive with its parents from Kensington to Euston Station, but it was missed shortly afterwards. It is believed that the rattle was left behind in the cab. The father, Captain T. V. Oldham, R. A. M. C., who offers a reward for its recovery, explained that the rattle was an unusual one. It had been handed down from baby to baby in an unbroken chain for more than 120 years. It originally came from India.

If it be true, as reported in the Tokio Asahi, that Chang Tso-lin has bought an old torpedo-boat of 127 tons for $400,000, one can only say that he is an easy customer to get a good price out of. Such a craft could only be a deathtrap if it came into collision with anything better than junk. It raises an interesting point for the League of Nations and the Washington Naval Agreement, when we find that ships belonging to a Government can be sold to a jobber and resold to another Government for war purposes.

The Christmas entertainment of the Union Church Sunday School will be held tomorrow (Friday) commencing at 5.15 p.m. sharp. There is a very good program, and the scholars have been hard at work for several weeks in order to give a successful concert. Six boys and seven girls will form a Pierrot troupe, and will endeavor to entertain the younger members of the audience. There will be two short plays—"Peace on Earth" and

No charge is being made for admission, but Father Christmas will take up a special collection for destitute Russian and Chinese children in Shanghai. The scholars hope in this way to raise $350. Parents of the scholars, and other friends, are heartily invited to be present.

N. N. Kolesnikoff announces himself as the editor of a new Russian daily newspaper which is to commence publication in Shanghai within a few days. There is also to be a Sunday edition, but this is to be in English.

Mrs. Francis Liu, Miss Amy Spalding, and Miss Hui Wen-chang of the Chinese W.C.T.U. spent Tuesday afternoon on a mission for the organization. They included in their calls a visit to the wounded soldiers at the Red Cross Hospital and in addition distributed literature to the soldiers, together with stockings which were made at the Settlement House maintained by the organization, spoke to them of the evils of drinking and smoking.

Two Noted Visitors Are Entertained By Changsha Residents

(China Press Correspondence)
Changsha, Dec. 12.—Changsha has been favored with the visits of two distinguished persons the past week. The Countess Bernadotte of Wisborg, niece of the King of Sweden, has been visiting several of the institutions under Swedish auspices in Hunan. She has altered her plans so that she can stay here until after Christmas.

Another visitor of note has been the Rev. W. T. A. Barber, D.D., President of Richmond College, London. Dr. Barber was formerly in Central China under the Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society, in which capacity he founded Wesley College, Wuchang. Returning to England 32 years ago, he became headmaster of the Leys School in Cambridge and later president of Richmond College. He has given a series of lectures at the Yale-China Chapel on the History of the Mediaeval Universities in Europe which have been keenly appreciated both for their content and for the charming personality of the speaker. In other addresses Dr. Barber has spoken fluently in Chinese, although it has been more than thirty years since he has used it, but his command even of the new terminology bespeaks the inherent scholarship of the man.

Dr. and Mrs. Thornton B. Penfield and Rev. Thornton B. Penfield Jr. have been visiting their daughter and sister, Mrs. R. M. Atwater while on their way around the world. Dr. Penfield was for a number of years one of the secretaries of the International Committee of C. M. C. A. and has many old friends in the Orient.

The local political situation is practically unchanged and all is quiet. The Governor's circular telegram to the Provinces urging independence from the Central Government along the lines adopted by Hunan seems to have received at least some approval so far.

Sun Yat-sen Still Ill In Tientsin

According to a message from Peking received by a local organization yesterday Dr. Sun Yat-sen, head of the Kuomintang, is still ill in Tientsin but will probably proceed to Peking in about a week.

Everything is quiet in the capital, the message says, and Tuan Chi-jui, chief executive, is in excellent health. The recent reports of his flight from the capital are entirely rumor and without foundation, the message adds.

SWORDSMEN GET IN TRAINING IN SHANTUNG AGAIN

Activities Are Not Directed Against Foreigners, However

(China Press Correspondence)

Tientsin, Shantung, Dec. 12.—This city has been as far from the fighting both in the North and South as any place but we have not been without the results of the war. For several days the trains stopped entirely and our mail came as in pre-railroad days on the shoulders of couriers. The enterprise of the postoffice people was appreciated and was in keeping with the record of this department through the years. After the Feng coup the people here very largely opposed. Feng as there is strong sympathy for Wu and it was felt that he had been left in the lurch by Feng in a way that left Feng with the reputation of a disloyal quitter and traitor.

During the last few days the train service has been seriously interrupted again by the dispatch of thousands of troops to the Szechuan region where a reported mutiny has called for drastic action by the state troops.

One day this week eight trains of troops passed through this city and one result was that the Mail train from the north was 18 hours late. Every train is packed and travel is not a joy. We met passengers on the train yesterday coming from Peking to Hankow but routed around this way as the Hankow trains are not running; this of course adds to the crush of traffic on this line where not a quarter of the usual trains are running.

Rumors of reviving Boxerism were floating around this city recently as it was reported that a knife-maker in the North suburb had supplied such weapons to two hundred who were zealously practicing as they did 25 years ago. As this is the place where the old boxer business began it seemed that perhaps history was repeating.

Investigation has shown that while there are groups of men practicing with the big knives there is no anti-foreign or anti-Christian feeling. Some of the gods are encouraging each other's organization of knife men to discourage the coming of brigands. Naturally the local missionaries are keeping in touch with the situation.

U. S. Will Pay No Heed To Soviet

(Reuter's American Service)

Washington, Dec. 17.—The Government is not answering M. Tschicherin's note of yesterday at which the chargé d'affaires are very anxious. The note contains similar plates order passed by to take observations in order to compensate their compasses from the charted records. They have been fixed in many foreign places. The standardised warning against violation which is intended for domestic consumption.

Note: M. Tschicherin's note above referred to contained a strong protest to the United States against "lawless acts" of American officials who were alleged to have fixed a brass plate in the Tchukotka Peninsula, bearing an inscription which warned Soviet citizens not to interfere with it.

Party Of American Nuns Has Thrilling Encounter With Bandits In Honan

(Independent News Service) Hankow, Dec. 11.—Sisters Mary Finn, Mary Loreita, Devola, Patricia Rose, and Electa, of New Jersey, U. S. A., who were robbed by bandits at Siningkai, Honan, on December 2nd, have returned safely to Hankow after a most trying experience. The Rev. Matthias Mayou, who brought the Sisters from America, and The Rev. Dominic Langenbacher, and a party of Chinese teachers and servants left Hankow with the sisters on November 1st, for Siningkai where the nuns were to carry on mission work. The Rev. Langenbacher yesterday told story of their amazing adventure with the bandits.

On the voyage to Changteh their boat was fired on at Yupetang about five or six times, by soldiers who were supposed to be searching for their enemies. Fortunately the party reached Changteh safely. Shortly after their arrival Szechuenese troops commenced to arrive from Western Hunan, also a number of generals.

Including Hsiao Keh-wu, Tang Tse-mo, and Ho Lung, with about 2,000 men. They learned that the latter were marching down with the object of reaching Hsiao Keh through Shai.

While at Changteh the plucky little party received word from their mission at Siningkai advising them not to proceed further on account of bandits. They waited until November 22. The dampness and darkness of the house where they were staying became intolerable. General Tang Tse-mo, who had arrived on the 20th, when interviewed by the party, assured them that there was no danger along the river and gave them a passport and two unarmed soldiers.

The party then proceeded to Taoyuan, where they heard of the prevalence of bandits 50 or 60 li up and below Lohhsia. This territory they learned was overrun with bandits. No boats could pass through, even steamers bearing mail were obliged to return.

The Rev. Langenbacher went to see General Chow Tia-plan and asked for soldiers. The general advised him not to go on without adequate protection, and offered him a guard of forty men, with guns, in the event of the party's continuing. However, the general was suddenly called away by Tang Tse-mo, to Lichow, and no soldiers were then available.

OTHERS ARRIVE

Mr. and Mrs. Kupp of the American Reform Church, Mr. Whitner, and Miss Myers, arrived on a boat from Yochow, on November 29th to also visit Siningkai and the Protestant Mission and schools there. They said that they had insurance from Siningkai that they could proceed without danger. The sisters and their party then accompanied them, travelling together till they reached Siningkai.

At Siningkai two bands of brigands fought on the morning of December 2nd. On its arrival the boat containing the Protestant missionaries was held up and the passengers robbed. The bandits then sailed down river and met and stopped the boat containing the nuns and party at about half a mile from Siningkai.

The latter saw ten of the bandits, who were all good looking fellows and well-dressed. They were said to be officers of the Taoyuan army, which was defeated by General Hsiao Keh-wu.

Each bandit had a brand new automatic pistol and demanded $3,000, threatening to carry off the party into the mountains if they refused to pay that sum. The party had only $100, which they handed over. The brigands threatened to shoot the Rev. Matthias Mayou, but changed their mind on hearing that a boatload of soldiers was arriving. The bandits then dispersed.

The little band decided to return home, abandoning their mission after such frightful experiences, following the boat supposed to have soldiers aboard. About half a mile down river they decided to land. The other boat had anchored, the supposed soldiers landing ahead of them. The latter offered to conduct them to their destination for a certain sum but of course the party were now without funds. They were compelled to here, spend a night of fear, as they soon discovered that these men were also bandits. Early the following morning they sailed for Taoyuan on route to Changteh and Hankow.

MOTORISTS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE IN BANDIT RAID

Walled Town In Honan Looted By Band Of 200 Armed Men

(Independent News Service) Yencheng, Honan, Dec. 9.—Bandits are bestirring themselves in the country round about. A large walled town twenty miles east of here, Hsiao Yao, was raided by the bandits early in the morning of December 7th. A band of about 200 armed men broke into the town and began a systematic looting of the place. Two of the foreigners connected with the Seventh Day Adventist Mission here happened to be in Hsiao Yao at the time. They had started on a tour of the Eastern part of the province but their car had broken down the day before, just as they reached Hsiao Yao. So they were fairly caught in the trap.

After an hour or so of looting the bandits discovered the foreigners, and one of their leaders came into the chapel to see about it. He was well treated, given a meal and food provided for several of his men. Soon others of the horde came pouring into the place and, were for taking the foreigners and holding them for ransom, but the leader would not allow it. The bandits closed all the gates of the city allowing no one to leave and no one to enter. They held the place for thirty-six hours, and when their work of looting and taking of hostages was done, took their departure in a Northwesterly direction.

Only a few houses were burned, and it is reported that but three men were killed, and seven wounded. Some of the wounded have since been brought in to our hospital here. Yesterday your correspondent made a trip to Hsiao Yao to find out what had happened to the foreigners, and also to our property there. I was glad to find that none of our property had been damaged, and that none of the people had been taken for ransom. The country-side is in a state of terror, and few people are to be seen on the roads.

The robbers who looted Hsiao Yao are, by their own statement, part of the forces of the former civil governor, Li Chi-chen. They have scattered over all of Honan south of the Yellow River.

Late last evening the two foreigners with the crippled car arrived here. They look none the worse for their experience, but say that once is plenty, as the bandits are armed to the teeth with automatic rifles, and bayonets, and the handling of the weapons.

SUN CHUAN-FANG RECRUITS MORE MEN FOR ARMY

Gentry in Chekiang Pursuing Safety First Policy And Coming Here

(China Press Correspondence)
Hangchow, Dec. 16.—The situation here is a bit easier since the news of Marshal Ch'iu's surrender, but recruiting is still going strong—some 7,000 have been added to the ranks and the reason given for such increase is that all the old troops have gone to strategic points and new recruits are needed for self-preservation.

Most of the important gentry are in Shanghai, no doubt devising plans for further changes here and making sure they are beyond the "sequestering" limit. General Sun still continues to change officials the last one we hear to go is the Commissioner of Education.

The trains are now running through to and from Shanghai and we are again in touch with civilization and get our paper the same day it is printed.

Foreign goods from Shanghai which have paid import duty are again being seized on the streets and inland duty demanded although this is an Open Port. On Sunday night there was a big fire when 50 houses were completely burned out.

The "Kao-ming Society" is having what are called "preparatory" meetings but what these mean we do not know.

The "Abolish Opium Society" is active against opium smoking and General Sun is said to be lending his help. Strength to his elbow.

Miss Joynt who retired from the C.M.S. in Hangchow 4 years ago is paying a visit to her old friends Dr. and Mrs. Main. She has been in India the last two years helping in the Sandes Soldiers Homes. She has just been to Japan to see the C.M.S. work among the Chinese Students in Tokio.

Expect Casualties In Warship Wreck Will Total 100

(China Press Radio)
Tokio, Dec. 15.—It is known that forty members of the crew of the special service ship which foundered last Friday were drowned and it is expected that the casualties will reach 100 out of a total of 200.

Destroyer Divisions Return To Manila

(China Press Radio)
Manila, Dec. 17.—The thirty-eighth and forty-fifth destroyer divisions returned to Manila last night from the practice ground of Corregidor. The U.S.S. Tracy and the U.S.S. Bovie will proceed to Olongapo tomorrow for docking. The remainder of the destroyers are expected to remain in Manila Harbor until after the Christmas holidays so as to give the officers and men shore leave. The U.S.S. Canopus, submarine tender, the mother ship, and the seventeenth division of submarines proceeded to Mariveles yesterday for maneuvers.

THREE TOWNS IN HONAN CAPTURED BY BANDIT ARMY

Wu Pei-fu Still At Chikungshan; Has No Troops With Him Now

Special Dispatch to THE CHINA PRESS

Yencheng, Honan, Dec. 16 (Delayed).—Marshal Wu Pei-fu is in good health at Chikungshan. He has no military organization supporting him.

Hupei troops control the railway south of Sintien. General Hu Ching-yi, commanding the invading Shensi forces, is in control north of this place.

The town of Chaokiao was burned and looted on December 14 by bandits. All of the missionary residents are safe. The towns of Hungingfu and Siaolo were also looted.

(Eastern News Agency) Hankow, Dec. 16.—The remnants of Marshal Wu Pei-fu's troops having been disbanded in the districts of Lichiat and Hsintien, Honan, peace and order have now been restored along the Kin-Han line.

As a consequence, it is expected that the train service between Hankow and Peking will be reopened as from tonight.

GIVES HIS $100,000 FIRM TO HIS EMPLOYEES.

James T. Emery (with cigar) and Employees

Six employees of the Union Club Motor Livery, of Chicago, decided to give their boss a birthday present, but he gave them the surprise of their lives. He just told them he was going to retire to Florida to live, and that the entire $100,000 business was theirs, lock, stock and barrel. The boss was James T. Emery, shown shaking hands with his son, Henry, who was one of the favored employees. The others shown in the picture, from left to right, are James Brady, Fred Florenz, John Forsberg, (in rear), and Mrs. Helen Campbell.

Many Delegates Attend Fete At Leeds University

(Reuter's Service) London, Dec. 17.—The celebration of the coming of age of Leeds University was marked by a reception of delegates and the presentation of congratulatory addresses from universities throughout the world, including universities in the Dominions, in India and Hongkong.

The Rev. Dr. Mackichan, speaking for the universities of India, Burma and the Far East pointed out that the danger in India was that knowledge was pursued too exclusively for its own sake, therefore contact with the western world would be a beneficial corrective.

Dirigible Will Fly To Honolulu

Washington, November 13.—Two attempts to fly to Hawaii from the Pacific Coast, one by dirigible and the other by a new type of super-seaplane, are in prospect as a result of plans developed at the Navy Department today.

The dirigible Shenandoah is to make the flight from California to Honolulu early next year in connection with the maneuvers of the combined fleets. It was also learned at the Navy Department today that contracts have been let for the construction of an extra large seaplane capable of making the flight from the Pacific Coast to the Hawaiian Islands. The new flying boat, which will have a cruising radius of 2,500 miles, a speed of 100 miles an hour and will carry five passengers, is being constructed in Seattle.

Indications developed from inquiry at Seattle are that the plane will not be completed until June or July.

As for the Shenandoah, her proposed flight of more than 2,000 miles across the open sea has the hearty approval of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur.

The combined fleets of the United States navy are to assemble off the California coast in April and probably will depart for Honolulu late that month, acting as a convoy for the aerial grayhound.

Although a definite starting point has not been decided upon, it is understood that San Diego will be selected because it has the only mooring mast in California.

'Rozvedenu Zena' Printed In Prague

Prague, Nov. 15.—True to its character of being militantly modern, Prague has the honor of producing the first newspaper devoted exclusively to the interests of the divorced woman—"Rozvedena Zena" ("The Divorced Wife"), which has just appeared, and which is promised twice a month.

The ever increasing number of divorces, coupled with conditions that often leave the wife and children unprotected for, is responsible not only for this new journal but also for the founding last month of a new society devoted to the same cause.

Mme. Aupicova, the divorced wife of an official in one of the Ministries, and the president of the society, has cherished the idea for many years and now feels that the time has come for active work. The divorced woman must learn the divorce laws, must know her rights. The husband will be compelled to fulfill his duties. Statistics of the divorces will be published and the reasons for the divorces.

The new society looks upon marriage as a holy sacrament, and where this sanctity is broken by callous men it will do all in its power to protect the material interests of the wife or the children.

The leading members of the society are naturally all divorced women—the wife of an academy painter, the wife of a lawyer, the wife a magistrate, etc. One man, a doctor, is in the society. At the opening meeting he was unconsciously humorous when he said that he hoped the number of members would advance by leaps and bounds.

Chicago To Have Tallest Hotel

Chicago, Nov. 15.—With the taking out of a building permit for a $17,000,000 forty-five story addition to the Morrison Hotel, Chicago is assured the largest and tallest hotel in the world. The annex will climb cloudward 506 feet and will have 850 rooms.

When this is completed another huge addition is planned which will bring the total number of rooms up to 3,400. This will be approximately a thousand more than the Pennsylvania in New York, now the world's largest.

The annex will be ready for guests by December, 1925. Wreckers will begin at once tearing down the old structure just south of the present Morrison, on Clark street.

On the roof of the forty-fifth floor of the tower will be a ten room steel and concrete bungalow to be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Mohr. Mohr is president and general manager of the Morrison Hotel.

Military Training In Japan Is A Substitute For Sports, Says Tanaka

Japanese Inclined To Look On U. S. Naval And Military Plans As Effort To Invigorate Nation

Declaring that the Japanese were more inclined to look upon American naval and military undertakings in the light of their being an effort to invigorate the popular mind than as preparations for actual warfare, General Baron Ochiichi Tanaka, former Japanese Minister of War, several times mentioned as probable Premier and present unofficial head of the Choshu clansmen and the militarists of Japan, urged that the people of both the United States and Japan look at one another in a sympathetic rather than a suspicious frame of mind, during an interview with a representative of The Japan Advertiser.

General Tanaka had been asked to give his views on the introduction of universal military training into the schools of Japan next April, a measure which he favors, but his remarks extended beyond this one subject in their significance. Minister of War in more than one Ministry and Japan's official delegate to repay the visit of Major General Leonard Wood, General Tanaka is one of the "unseen powers" in the shaping of this Empire's affairs. He is generally regarded as the successor of the late Prince Yamagata, who for nearly two decades was the most powerful man in Japan, or as near that statesman's successor as is any person. The power of the Choshu clan has been one of the strongest since Satsuma and Choshu united to wrest control from the Tokugawa Shogunate and restore it to the hands of the Emperor more than a half-century ago.

WIELDS MUCH POWER

Retiring from Government office three years ago, General Tanaka has nevertheless remained one of the most active factors in shaping national affairs whenever a crisis has arisen by virtue of his leadership of Choshu and the adherents to the Choshu group among the higher officials of the Army and Navy and bureaucratic statesmen. The shifting of high military officials a month or more ago, including the premature retirement of one of the ranking officers in Japan's military organization, was credited to General Tanaka's displeasure with the views held and expressed by the individuals concerned. His home in the outskirts of Tokyo is as much frequented by visitors of importance in governmental affairs as are many Government Departments.

When the subject of military training for the students of Japan was mentioned, General Tanaka burst forth with:

"Why on earth is our military training proposition worrying America in any way? Does any one read something mysterious or suspicious into this program? We have borrowed the idea from the United States. Our system is essentially American, save as regards details. We have studied how the American authorities are, through military discipline, trying to keep the spirit of that nation vigorous, steady and energetic, and we have found that their system is very clever. So we intend to copy it."

"We are merely putting into practice the old saying that a sound mind dwells in a sound body. What objection can there be to the application of this healthful doctrine, if good and not harm is to be accomplished through so simple a contrivance?

"To impute any intention to us of making preparations for war is absurd. Call it a revival of militarism if you will, that is, if you understand militarism to be identical with 'mens sano in corpore sano.' Our people most acutely need well disciplined habits of life. All who know anything of the living conditions of the Japanese will be easily convinced by my statement, for life in this country is sadly lacking in chances for physical development. Sports are certainly becoming fashionable, but comparatively few can take part in them. They can not be universal in their application. Something else had to be substituted to fill the gap, and the result was the decision to introduce military training into all the schools."

COMBATS MORIBID THOUGHT

The military leader went on to explain that he considered the effect of such training to be quite healthful in the long run, as it was an indirect method of combating morbid thought. "The essential point," he said, "is the spirit in which the system is practiced. Given sane judgment, peaceful aspirations and due discretion, and there is absolutely no reason why the system should not be adopted as an effective but not necessarily warlike means for the physical and moral training of the people."

"The misunderstanding which seems to have arisen may be credited to a prejudice which is born of lack of sympathy with and ignorance of local conditions. For example, some of the military and naval undertakings of the United States have given rise to adverse press criticism in this country. But if we soar above nationalistic prejudice and suspicion to take a sympathetic view of the matter, I consider that there is sufficient reason for the United States—or any other country, for that matter—to work out some such scheme for maintaining the vigor and energy of the popular mind. A high state of civilization and the accumulation of tremendous wealth such as we witness in the United States are not always an unmingled blessing for a country. Local statesmen should study how they can effectively maintain a nation's morale in the face of demoralizing civilization."

PLEADS FOR BROADER VIEW

"In Japan we are more inclined to look upon American military and naval activities in this light than otherwise. I believe also that statesmen should guard against being erroneously influenced by the calumny of critics who are tempted to say something extraordinary in order to be interesting. If the American people study the spirit and the actual circumstances of institutions in Japan, I am certain they will come to the same conclusion which I have reached regarding military undertakings that American statesmen have in mind. Japan, no more than the United States, can refrain through fear of incurring misunderstanding abroad from adopting a system of

NOTABLE MAYA RUINS ARE BEING UNCOVERED.

Wonderful disclosures of the ancient Maya civilization of Yucatan are already resulting from the expedition of the Carnegie Institute and the Mexican Government. ## Chi's Rumored Arrival On American Ship Denied

Despite detailed descriptions of the manner of his arrival which appeared in the local vernacular press yesterday, Chi Hsieh-yuan, ousted tuchun of Kiangsu province, did not come to Shanghai on Tuesday evening aboard an American warship.

This assertion may be made in the authority of Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, United States Minister to Peking, who last night denied strenuously that any American naval vessel had been used to transport Chi to Shanghai.

According to the Chinese versions, which had no foundation in fact, Tuchun Chi, arrived off Woosung aboard an American warship at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. His former officers now resident in Shanghai, these stories say, had been advised of his coming and left for Woosung education which is considered wholesome and effective.

"With the wide expanse of the Pacific Ocean between us and with the chance of actual conflict practically all, save the most far-fetched imaginations, I think that we should first of all try to look at each other in a sympathetic light instead of one of suspicion. A broad-minded and sympathetic attitude is, I should say, the first essential condition of world peace."

A SOLUTION

To The Problem of "What Shall I Give?"

Pathe-Baby

relate that 200 wounded soldiers besieged Hsu Kuo-chan, newly appointed military governor, in his yamen.

The soldiers were temporarily appeased on a promise that Chi Hsieh-yuan would pay them; the report says, but later, in company with many others, visited Chi's yamen after the promised money had not been forthcoming, and created a disturbance there, as snatching the chief of the military hospital. Chi's bodyguard is said to have refused to interfere, and the men were not finally dispersed until after they had been paid, sums varying from $10 to $40 each, a total in excess of $20,000, according to the report.

HEALTH BOARD BARS 'DEATH GAS' GASOLINE IN N.Y.

Fifth Victim Of Ethyl Poisoning Dies In Straitjacket

With a fifth fatality recently among the victims of the tetraethyl lead poisoning in the development plant of the Standard Oil Company at Bayway, N. J., the Health Commissioner prohibited the use of gasoline in New York City containing this chemical compound.

A resolution embodying the order the board holds that "mixtures of gasoline containing lead or other deleterious substances may prove detrimental and dangerous to the health and lives of the community, particularly when released as exhaust from motor vehicles."

A suggestion for similar action has been sent to all the health officers in Union County, N. J., by County Prosecutor David, who advised that the distribution of ethyl gas, the gasoline mixture containing the lead compound, be stopped until it was satisfactorily demonstrated that it might be used without danger.

The five poison victims at Bayway are believed to have been killed by the infiltration into their systems of the toxic fumes of tetraethyl lead which they were using in the manufacture of ethyl gasoline at the Bayway plant. The addition of the lead compound to gasoline was said to increase efficiency of automobile engines and to eliminate "knocking."

TREATMENT IS DISCOVERED

Physicians at first were at a loss to deal with the strange symptoms exhibited by the men stricken by the lead fumes. Within the last few days, however, a form of treatment has been discovered at the Reconstruction Hospital, where all the affected men were taken, which gives indications of counteracting the effects of the poison.

The discovery came too late to save the life of Herbert Fuson, of Elizabeth, the last of the first five sufferers from the deadly toxin.

Like the four other victims who were taken to the hospital, Fuson was stricken insane and had to be confined in a straitjacket up to the moment of his death.

There are still thirty-three men in the hospital undergoing treatment, but only five of these are classed by hospital physicians as serious. It is the belief of Dr. Maximin Tournier, the attending physician, that all of the cases are now well in hand and that further fatalities will be averted by the new treatment, for which, it is said, he is chiefly responsible.

SEEKS TO DISSOLVE LEAD

This treatment is based on the theory that the men are suffering from an acute form of lead poisoning, and are given sodium bromide as a laxative, with intravenous injections of hypophosphite of soda to dissolve the lead out of the body tissues. Dr. W. Gilman Thompson, president of the board of directors of the hospital, and consulting physician to the Standard Oil Company, said yesterday the men were showing marked improvement under this treatment, and he thought it would prevent further fatalities.

Dr. Thompson, with Thomas Midgely Jr., the inventor of ethyl gas, said at the offices of the Standard Oil Company yesterday that this form of poisoning was nothing new to science. Mr. Midgely, who came here from Dayton, Ohio, where he is vice-president of the Ethyl Gas Corporation, which shares ownership of the compound with the Standard Oil Company, said that similar outbreaks had taken place in the plant of the General Motors Chemical Company at Dayton less than a year ago, when two men died and forty employees were stricken, and that workers in the du Pont plants who handled the tetraethyl lead mixture had also been affected in a milder degree. It would the lethal fumes were not as mysterious as was first suggested.

It was Mr. Midgely's contention that under proper safeguards the lead fumes were not deadly and in proof of his argument he produced a bottle of the ethyl, three-fifths of which was tetraethyl lead, and, pouring it into his palms, washed his hands with it and held the bottle to his nostrils for more than a minute. He insisted that the fumes could have no such effect as was observed in the victims if inhaled for only a short time. He declared that what injuries resulted were caused by heedlessness of the workers in failing to follow instructions.

LIKE DELIRIUM TREMENS

"The recently discovered use of tetraethyl lead," said Dr. Thompson, "has occasioned unforeseen accidents which should be avoidable in the future. One of these has been the sudden escapes of fumes from large retorts and the inhalation of such fumes gives rise to acute symptoms, particularly congestion of the brain, producing a condition not unlike delirium tremens. Although there is lead in the compound, these acute symptoms are wholly unlike those of chronic lead poisoning. There is no obscuring whatever about the effects of the poison and characterizing the substance as mystery gas or insanity gas is grossly misleading."

Dr. Thompson added that the product destined for final use in gasoline engines was greatly diluted, usually with 1,000 parts of gasoline, and that this diluted product had been in use for more than a year in 10,000 filling stations and garages without any ill effects thus far reported.

Three experts from the United States Bureau of Mines visited Health Commissioner Monaghan yesterday with respect to the subject and departed later in the day for Washington.

In Newark an ordinance prohibiting the use of the tetraethyl lead gasoline mixture is to be placed before the city commission next Wednesday. At a conference in the office of Mayor Briedenbach it was declared that the use of the preparation in the new Hudson River vehicular tube would turn it into a death trap.

MRS. G. B. FRYER IS SPEAKER AT A. W. C. MEETING

Tells Proper Procedure For Preparation Of Vegetables

Mrs. G. B. Fryer was the principal speaker at the joint meeting of the Gardening and Home Economics Departments yesterday morning at American Women's Club headquarters. Mrs. Fryer spoke on the "Preparation of Vegetables."

She began with an introductory explanation of the composition of plants, their nutritional content and value. From these explanations she went on to the various ways of preparing vegetables to render them most palatable and, at the same time, to extract their full food value. The most common method, of course, is boiling. The simpler way of preparing vegetables is of course the best for a properly grown and cooked vegetable will be readily digested and pleasing to the taste, but a badly cooked water-soaked vegetable generally causes indigestion which may become serious.

"All green vegetables, roots and tubers should be crisp and firm when ready to cook. Soaking vegetables in very cold water for a short time before preparing them for cooking will restore their firmness. The newer the vegetable the less soaking required. Cabbage, cauliflower and Brussels sprouts should be soaked heads down in salted cold water to which a few spoonfuls of vinegar have been added. If there are any bugs or worms inside they will crawl out."

"To secure the best results all vegetables except dried ones should be put into boiling water and the water made to boil again as soon as possible after the vegetables have been added and kept boiling until the cooking is finished. Herbaceous vegetables should boil rapidly all the time but tubers, roots, cauliflower, etc., should not boil so fast as to break the vegetable. Green peas and beans when removed from the pot should be cooked gently, almost simmered. If pods and all are used, cook fast."

Mrs. Fryer explained in detail that just to boil a vegetable and serve it is not enough. Something must be known of the length of time necessary for proper boiling and whether hot or cold water should be used to begin with. Waste in preparing vegetables can be avoided by care. She went on to give de-

QUESTIONS WOMEN ASK

Why do I continually suffer? What am I to do to regain health? These are questions many women are despairingly asking themselves as they feel strength and vitality steadily diminishing day by day.

The trouble with most of these women lies in the blood. They are anemic—a condition especially common in the Far East—and because of this anemia, or blood poverty, the bodily functions have lost regularity, the digestion has grown weak, the nerves have become run-down, the eyes lack lustre, the glow of health has faded from lips and cheeks, despondency and pains have taken the place of that joyous care-free vigor which should be every woman's birthright.

What is the remedy? It is to restore to the blood, through the medium of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, the richness and strength which it lacks and whereby new life, new energy, new health, may be carried through the veins to the nerves, to the organs, to every part of the system. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been doing just this work for over five-and-thirty years. It is for this reason that they are famous as a Blood and Nerve Tonic remedy throughout the world.

No matter whether you are man or woman, if you are a sufferer from any malady due to impure weak blood or disordered nerves, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do you good. Your chemist sells them, or post free, $1.50 per bottle, $3. for 6 bottles, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

Czar's Secret Police Chief Tells How Revolution Began In War Plants

In the following article, the last of five written by the late Russian Czar's Secret Police Chief, the author describes the events leading up to the Russian Revolution and the abdication of the Emperor.

BY GEN. M. S. KOMMISSAROV

After two years of war the Russian Government by the end of 1916 was in a precarious position. The Duma, led by the Progressive bloc, assumed an uncompromising attitude, and cooperation between the legislative body and Ministry was impossible.

The most important public organizations supplying the army, for example the City and Rural Unions, the War Industrial Committee, with its Labor Division, and the various war plants and factories, were infested with revolutionary propaganda, and because of their close contact with the forces at the front, the propaganda penetrated into the ranks and the army.

The place of residence of the Czar and the seat of all higher Government institutions, Petrograd (then St. Petersburg) was the concentration point of more than 500,000 reserves, consisting mostly of local workers who had been called to the colors. They were strongly infected with revolutionary ideas and resembled an armed mob rather than a disciplined military body. They were virtually devoid of regular army officers and were led by reserve officers instead. During minor labor disturbances it was a common occurrence to see soldiers not only refuse to aid the police but even interfere with their work.

Commanders of the reserve units of the guards did not realize the dangerous state of mind of their military units, and reported to their superiors that everything was well with the army, while in reality the capital was filled with supply troops.

BEGINNING OF REVOLUTION

Public opinion was greatly influenced by the Constitutional Democratic Party led by Pavel Nikolaevitch Milukov. The party had a large and intelligent membership, which included persons of high social standing. It assumed a hostile attitude not only toward the Government but toward the dynasty as well, and believed that conditions favored the attainment of its own political ends. Unfortunately the members of this party did not foresee the terrible results their efforts to overthrow the existing Government were bound to have, especially in time of war.

In justice to Milukov it should be stated that he warned his adherents of the consequences to which a revolution might lead. "In forming a new government," he said, "at a time when we are not certain whether we shall be able to keep that promise, we are waving a red cloth before the eyes of an infuriated bull. If we fail to keep that promise, anarchy is sure to follow." But the desire for power and ministerial portfolios of his colleagues proved stronger than the advice of prudence.

The Progressive bloc realized, of course, that without the aid of the army, especially in war time, it would be impossible to bring about a revolution. An effort was therefore made to enlist the support and sympathy of the officers and higher command of the army.

This did not prove a difficult task, for the ground had already been prepared. Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaevitch, former Commander-in-Chief of the Russian army, was weak in his disapproval of the Czar and the Czarina. Whenever the royal couple visited the front the Grand Duke ostentatiously left his headquarters. This, of course, was not calculated to increase the loyalty of the army command. Officers were outspoken in their remarks of the Czar and they did not hesitate to voice it in the presence of private soldiers.

The army knew of the threat which Grand Duke Nicholas had made in the past to turn the guns against Petrograd. Even after he was removed from the post of Commander-in-Chief and was appointed Military Governor of the Caucasus, he did not break off his relations with his fellow-conspirators in the army staffs of the forces at the front. He conducted a lively correspondence with General Alexeyev, Chief of Staff, and also with the well known political leader Guchkov, who had a strong personal dislike for Nicholas II. The effects of this soon appeared. During the Czar's visits to her husband at the front, Alexeyev always absented himself from the headquarters, feigning illness.

ARMY LEADER JOINS CONSPIRATORS

The first army leader to join the conspirators against the reigning couple was General Ruzsky, commanding officer of the Northern armies and adjutant-general of the Czar. An active part in the conspiracy was taken also by General Bontch-Bruyevitch, Ruzsky's favorite and colleague and head of his staff, whose brother later held the office of Secretary of the Council of the Commissars.

In December, 1916, in the home of Mme. Vitrova, in my presence, General Bontch-Bruyevitch on his knees was kissing the folds of the Czarina's dress and assuring her of his undying loyalty. A minute later he was joined by General Brusilov, commander of the Southern armies, also adjutant-general of the Czar. When the Czar handed Brusilov his shoulder knots the latter was so overjoyed that he kissed the Emperor's hand, but after the revolution the knot on his left arm in his army to tear them off, saying that the insignia burned his shoulders.

What were the members of the Imperial family doing to avert the dangers threatening the country and the dynasty? Did they rally round the throne to support its occupant? The Grand Dukes were busily engaged in cutting the knots that supported them. They spread the most absurd rumors about the reigning couple, which were accepted as true, since they came from apparently authoritative and authentic sources. This naturally aroused the enmity of the people against their rulers. The Grand Dukes were directly responsible for the breakdown of discipline among the units of the Guards, which were hitherto regarded as the mainstay of the throne, and this was particularly true of the crack cavalry regiments of the Imperial family in which several Grand Dukes served.

At the field headquarters and in the staff offices of the cavalry troops of the Guards, conspiracies were hatched for various purposes—the murder of Rasputin, the banishment and imprisonment of the Czarina and organization of a coup d'etat in the palace. Finally, with the knowledge of all but the reigning members of the Romanoff family, Grand Dukes Dmitri Pavlovitch and Nikita Alexandrovitch displayed some energy by killing Rasputin, but did not have the courage to carry out in its entirety the plan which they had adopted.

TREASON IN THE COURT

Immediately after the murder of Rasputin a letter was written by Princess Yousouppoff, mother of one of the participants in the murder, Felix Yousouppoff, to Grand Duchess Xenia Alexandrovna, sister of the Czar and mother of another accomplice, Grand Duke Nikita Alexandrovitch. In this letter she wrote: "It is a pity that they did not carry out the whole plan on that day and did not remove all those who should have been removed. All that can be done now is to look her up. Grand Duchess Elizaveta Feodorovna, sister of the Empress and Sister Superior of the Martha-Maria Community of Deaconesses of Moscow, had wired her blessing 'for the patriotic deed.'"

The attitude of the Grand Dukes can be surmised from the action of the Prince of Leichtenberg, who in the middle of February, 1917, called at the palace and in great excitement demanded that the Emperor immediately compel the members of the royal household to take a new oath of allegiance to the Czar, insisting that upon that depended the safety of the Imperial family. In the end even the representative of foreign powers caused to be indifferent onlookers of the unfolding events. Most of them contented themselves with showing their sympathy with the manifested trends of public opinion. But the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir George W. Buchanan, took an active part, and his embassy became headquarters, my agents reported, for Milukov and some of the Grand Dukes. Milukov's archives were moved to the British mission.

Senator Bieletsky, who a short time previously had resigned the post of Assistant Minister of the Interior and Director of the Police Department of the State, and I used to meet frequently and discuss a report to the Czar, in the situation. We decided to forming him of the true state of affairs in Russia and warning him that it might lead the country and the dynasty to ruin. We drafted it and on Dec. 10, 1916, Bieletsky, through a friend of his attending the Czar on that day, handed it to the Emperor, Nicholas II, read it over carefully and seemed to be impressed with it. He designated the noon hour of the next day for a personal interview with him on the subject. At 10 o'clock in the morning that same day the Minister of the Interior, Protopopov suddenly arrived at the capital on a special train and was immediately received by the Emperor. As we learned later, the Czar had telephoned the contents of our report to the Minister over a direct wire.

Next day, instead of being an audience, Bieletsky was told that his presence at court was not wanted. As we found out later, when Protopopov was shown our report, he assured the Czar that the country was calm, that he was ready to answer for the truth of his assertion with his own life, and that our report had been submitted with a view to frightening the Emperor into turning his power over to us.

The consequences of our action were soon manifest. The day after Protopopov's return to the capital the Prefect of Petrograd, Dvorkin, telephoned to me and to Bieletsky that he had received instructions to take over the control of our telephone wires. After this an agent of mine came to report that detectives had been placed to watch our moves and asked me to tell him what to report about us.

The Duma became openly rebellious and refused to cooperate with Premier Starmer. To placate the Duma he was replaced by A. F. Trepov. But Trepov's first appearance in the Duma created a disturbance and he was in office only a few weeks. The cause of his dismissal was his demand for the resignation of Protopopov, Dobrovolsky and Belevay, all Ministers appointed with the aid of Rasputin.

RASPUTIN'S LETHARGY

Now that their representatives in the Ministries had been attacked Rasputin's adherents were alarmed, fearing reprisals from the Duma. Alexandra Feodorovna was greatly worried over the demand for Protopopov's dismissal, but at an intimate council it was decided to let him go. The all-important question now was to find a successor. Members of the Rasputin clique together with Protopopov searched among the monk's papers for a possible hint as to who might be a fit candidate for Protopopov's post. A photograph was found of Prince Galitsin, a feeble old man, who at one time was Governor of Tver and since 1900 had held no office. On the back of it was written in Rasputin's handwriting: "It is to be an Elder," which in the monk's parlance meant: "Fit to be Presiding Officer of the Council of Ministers."

Protopopov immediately took the photograph to the Empress and with the aid of Mme. Vitrova convinced her that the inscription was Rasputin's wish made known "from beyond the grave." Prince Galitsin was appointed Presiding Officer of the Council of Ministers. But despite Rasputin's assurance "from beyond the grave" that Galitsin was "fit to be an Elder," the Duma gave him a very hostile reception.

It was decided that the time for action had arrived, but that it was necessary to secure the Czar's departure from the capital. This was undertaken by Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, brother of the Czar, who was regarded as the future constitutional monarch of Russia. On February 15, 1917, he persuaded the Czar to leave for the front immediately, on the ground that the army was becoming restive because of his long absence. The conspirators then arranged with the municipal authorities to diminish or stop altogether the baking of bread in the municipal bakeries, in order to create a shortage of bread.

A strong agitation was started among factory workmen. They were urged to protest against the shortage in street demonstrations and to demand bread. The first demonstration occurred February 23. The crowds were peacefully marching up and down the streets, only occasionally shouting for bread and timidly looking about to see whether details of police or Cossacks were not coming to attack them. The authorities were inactive. The throngs gradually filled all the streets and became unruly.

Prudent people petitioned General Khabalov to order all military bakeries to bake bread throughout the night to supply the stores and public markets in the morning. Instead of this Khabalov ordered an inventory of all the food supplies of the city and issued a proclamation to the people assuring them that bread and other victuals would be continued to be sold in unlimited quantities.

The Duma and the press answered with an attack on Khabalov ridiculing his assertions. The masses remained apert. The spirit of revolt grew. The agitation of the people soon manifested itself in street riots. Khabalov ordered the occupation of all Government establishments by military units and placed the city under martial law. But the troops showed no vim in dispersing the mob. Before long the attitude of the troops became openly hostile to the Government. Excesses began. By Feb. 26 the only forces that remained loyal to the Government were the police and the gendarmes.

POLICE ACT ON OWN INITIATIVE

In the absence of instructions and seeing the complete breakdown of governmental authority, the head of the police reserves on his own initiative ordered machine guns set up in the streets, provided with only one belt of ammunition.

The Third Regiment of the sharpshooters of the Guards did not join the rioters but waited for some Government authority. None appeared. On Feb. 27, at 9 o'clock in the morning, was held the last meeting of the Council of Ministers. The director of the police department, Vasilev, reported that the revolutionary parties were striving to utilize the popular upheaval for their own political ends. It was decided to arrest all the known leaders of the revolutionary parties, but the next day the participants of the meeting were themselves arrested and placed under guard in the minister's pavilion of the Duma. The climax of this bloodless revolution was the solemn appearance, under the personal command of Grand Duke Cyril, of the Imperial Squadron of the Guards, the pride of the Romanoff family, who came to swear fealty to the revolution.

ARREST OF THE CZAR

The Imperial Palace was at the time a veritable hospital. Four Grand Duchesses and the Czarévitch were gravely ill with the measles. The Czarina was frantically calling the Emperor back from the field headquarters, but General Alexieff detained him until the Government power had passed to the Duma. Then he advised the Czar to return to Tsarke-Selo immediately. The Imperial train arrived at the railroad station of Dno, in the territory of the Northern Army commanded by General Hrusky. Here it was stopped and was not allowed to proceed any farther. The tracks in the immediate vicinity in the direction of both Petrograd and the field headquarters were removed. The station was crowded with unruly soldiers. The Emperor was alone in the first parlor car. The second car was occupied by his attendants, who were drinking heavily. On the platform appeared Rear Admiral Novik and, half articulating his words, he said:

"Do you want Nicholas? There he is," and pointed his finger to the first car.

The Czar, now deserted by all, was told that the entire army had mutinied, that there was no way of going back to the field headquarters or to proceed to Tsarke-Selo. Rodzianko, presiding officer of the Duma and Chamberlain of the Court, who had come to Dno, added to the Czar's discomfiture by informing him that the safety of the royal family could no longer be vouched for.

On March 2 there arrived Shuigin and Guchkov, members of the Duma, who had been sent by the Executive Committee of the Duma to urge the Czar to abdicate, the throne in favor of his son. They were instructed to impress upon the Emperor that failure to do so might react disastrously upon the members of the Czar's family.

The Emperor hesitated. Presently Ruzsky entered, seized the Emperor's hand, and putting it rudely, said:

"Come on, sign it."

All this time, at the door of the parlor car, was standing Karaulov, a member of the Duma from the Cossack territory of Terek, dressed in his native costume. Without taking part in the conversation, he was holding one hand on the hilt of his dagger, while with the other he was twirling his fierce mustache, emitting groans now and then. The Czar looked at him several times, then signed the abdication documents, and later was brought to Petrograd under arrest. The Romanoff dynasty was ended.

For some little time past the Commercial & Credit Information Bureau of Shanghai have been canvassing in Shanghai and Outports for information for a Directory they propose to publish to be called "The Comarib Directory of China". In the course of such canvass they have called on firms and presented for correction the cuttings taken from our 1924 Directory of China, the same being pasted on slips which are almost a facsimile of those used by us. They also carried a copy of our 1924 book and, as a result, many firms and business concerns have been misled into believing they were giving their corrections and contracts for advertising and the purchase of books to Rosenstock's.

Chinese Appreciation For Work Of The Volunteers

THE Chinese General Chamber of Commerce and the Chinese Ratepayers' Association on Tuesday of this week presented to the Shanghai Municipal Council a silver cup and a scroll as an expression of appreciation on the part of the Chinese commercial interests and population for the service rendered by the Council in extending protection during the recent inter-provincial war about Shanghai. The Chamber of Commerce and Ratepayers' Association were represented by Mr. Yu Ya-ching chairman of the Chamber, Mr. Fong Chu-pa of the Ratepayers' Association, and a number of the members while the Council was represented by Mr. Stirling Fessenden, Chairman; Col. W. F. L. Gordon, commander of the S. V. C.; Mr. E. S. Benbow-Rowe, acting secretary of the Council and an officer from each of the S. V. C. units, and representatives of the Settlement police.

Mr. Yu Ya-ching, Chairman of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce in the course of his address at the presentation said:

"To you who, as Councillors of the Municipality of this International Settlement, have left nothing undone to give the residents a full measure of tranquillity, we desire to express our cordial thanks. We realise that in serving the public you have had to sacrifice much of that time and energy, which men like you, who are identified with various business activities, could hardly spare.

"To the officers and members of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps, who habitually expose themselves to the severe trials of inclement weather and strict discipline, and who have particularly distinguished themselves by the services of incalculable value, gallantly rendered during the critical months of September and October so that the residents within the borders of this International Settlement have been able to enjoy uninterrupted peace, we earnestly offer our sincere tribute of profound gratitude and recognition.

"It is no exaggeration to say that the whole population of the Settlement owes the S. V. C. a heavy debt of appreciation. Although I am only spokesman here on behalf of the Chinese community, I feel nevertheless unspeakable pride in carrying out this function. Since the Chinese residents here constitute the majority of the population, and since the foreign nationals in our midst are but guests on Chinese soil, the success of the emergency measures should mean and does mean more to us than to our foreign neighbors."

Both Mr. Fessenden and Col. Gordon responded to this expression of appreciation. Mr. Fessenden speaking in part as follows.

"It gives me great pleasure to welcome you here today," he said. "It is extremely gratifying to my colleagues of the Council and to me, as their representative, to know that the services during the recent troubles of our Volunteer Corps, of which we are so justly proud, are apparently as highly appreciated by our friends of the Chinese Community as they are by us, as is amply evidenced by these beautiful tributes and the kindly expression of appreciation accompanying their presentation. During the recent State of Emergency there were many occasions upon which the Council sought the advice, assistance and cooperation of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce and other Chinese organisations.

"In every instance our requests met with the most cheerful and hearty response. I feel that the success with which many of the problems which arose during the emergency were met, and solved, is due in a great measure to the co-operation of the Chinese community. I trust that this spirit of co-operation on the part of both communities will continue in the future to the permanent benefit and success of the Settlement, and pave the way to a better understanding of our mutual points of view and difficulties."

Thus do we have another example of how adversity draws people together. And thus do we have a direct benefit resulting from the disastrous war which lasted for so many days and weeks in this part of China. The war hereabouts caused untold suffering on the part of thousands of innocent people and vast loss in treasure, but if the final effect is to be a unification of interests which have not always been harmonious, then the loss has not been in vain and the benefits of the future will cause the suffering soon to be forgotten.

It often has been pointed out in these columns of the China Press that there is no essential difference in the interests—legitimate interests—of the foreign and Chinese communities at Shanghai. They must either stand together or fall together. It is not possible to draw a line and say "this marks the boundary between foreign and Chinese interests," the reason being that commerce, which knows no nationality, through the decades has so intertwined foreign and native interest that they must prosper or fail as a unit. Whether it is in the matter of good roads within or without the Settlements; whether it is sanitation and water supply; whether it is fire protection or transportation, or whether it is protection against political disturbance, the interests of Chinese and foreigners are one and must stand as one if Shanghai is to take fullest advantage of its natural opportunities with which it has been endowed for service to the world.

Therefore it is most encouraging and gratifying to know that the responsible Chinese interests as represented in the Chamber of Commerce, the Ratepayers' Association and other bodies have had the courage to state their convictions and to present to the Municipal Council a lasting memento of their sentiments. May this event stand as a permanent monument to the UNITY of these Chinese and foreign interests here represented and a permanent discouragement to meddlers on either side who would seek to distract attention from the all important element of UNITY.

The Brain Of A Great Writer

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

In October died Anatole France, born Anatole Thibault, who, having taken the name of his country, had come to be regarded by his countrymen not only as the foremost representative of French literature in our day, but, upon the whole, as the greatest national figure in their contemporary life.

Among us no writer, merely as such, ever obtained a general influence and authority corresponding to what the French often accord to their leading authors. In granting this exalted rank to a standard-bearer of literature, they do not so much demand that the recipient shall be remarkable for intellectual power and originality, as that he shall write the French language with extraordinary beauty, grace, accuracy and effectiveness.

This was the case of Anatole France. He was not a great and original thinker; he gave to his country and to the world no great new ideas; but he was a clear, delightful, writer, master of a well-rounded, perfected style, which his admirers regard as the model of the very best. For them, Anatole France's writings are as "wine of the comet," and of a very unusual comet, too!

They also give him credit for having been a guardian of their language by the splendid example which he furnished of its inherent powers, and by the resistance which he furnished against undesirable and weakening innovations. That is a great service for any man to have rendered to his mother tongue, and one deserving of deathless commemoration. But it is probable that his countrymen somewhat exaggerate the influence of this great writer upon the thought of his time.

In view, however, of the immense reputation that he had, and of the ever-growing belief that somehow the secret of the mind may be read in the brain, it is not surprising that Anatole France's brain was removed for expert examination.

"If it had occurred to him that it would be of use to science," says one of his admirers, "he would himself have given the order to have his brain submitted to the inspection of the doctors."

And, indeed, what could be more interesting and informative than a careful study of an "organ of the mind" that has been used by a man of superior or commanding powers? Science seems to assure us that there we should find certain indications of at least the physical sources of such powers. It is like probing for the secret of a mysterious engine which, through some snap in the machinery, has broken down.

Unfortunately, as far as yet appears, we are not likely to learn much about the peculiarities of Anatole France's brain. It seems that his family, after having given their consent to the removal, were distressed at the thought of any publicity in the matter, and so put a seal upon it. However, something—highly interesting as far as it goes—has leaked out through the lips of Dr. Guillaume, hospital surgeon, who had charge of the case. I translate from the report of a writer in Le Temps:

"He (Dr. Guillaume) insisted strongly upon the scientific interest which the examination of such a brain offers. 'Have I studied it!' cried Dr. Guillaume. 'But I passed my entire night with it. I contemplated it; handled it; took notes of it; but he cannot publish those notes, nor give any details, he explains, because the family oppose, though why, he does not know. He adds that he feels he can go no farther than to say, with energy, that the result is 'magnifique, mordant!' The finest brain that one could dream of! By the fulness, the number, the delicacy, of the convolutions, the fringing as we say (in French) of the sulci, it is a unique specimen! And the doctor rubs his hands.'"

As far as it goes this enthusiastic outburst of Dr. Guillaume confirms expectation. Anatole France's writings were celebrated for their fineness of quality, for their smoothness of texture, for a certain well-rounded perfection of expression.

The uncommon "delicacy" of the "frisure" of the convolutions, which cerebral science affirms are the typical features of brain structure distinguishing the human from the anthropoid, together with the fulness and number of the convolutions, accord well with the mental character of the owner of the brain. But did the mind make the brain fine, as thought seems to cover the forehead with delicate wrinkles, or did the brain impart an original quality of its own to the mind? As to that, Sir Roger de Coverley would still find that "there is much to be said on both sides."

THE RETURNED STUDENTS

Editor: THE CHINA PRESS.
Dear Sir: Referring to Mr. Kung Mei-fong's letter which appeared in your columns of the 16th inst. concerning the predicament of Chinese returned students, I beg to state my humble opinions.

It is unfortunate indeed that a majority of the returned students, who have spent thousands of dollars and a number of years abroad to obtain foreign training, fail to achieve the success they anticipated. But the causes of their failure are many. Lack of a chance is only a minor one. In the first place, Western education is certainly superior to that in China in many respects, but it is not all-mighty, nor is it applicable everywhere. It can lead the Chinese students to learn up-to-date science and art, but it can not make all of them capable of applying his education to the problems of community—this depends upon the student himself.

So far as I know, many, if not most, Chinese students studying abroad pay very little or no attention to the practical phases of their education. University degrees and honors are of utmost emphasis. These seem to be the final goal of their education. When come back to China, they carry with them several trunks filled with foreign books and some high honors. Besides, they are influenced by foreign customs and traditions, but often there is nothing more. Hence, they are, however, incapable of undertaking any important task. The second reason lies in the fact that they hesitate to start from the bottom. Comfortable position with good pay is the first consideration. Evidently there are many chances offering to the returned students to translate their education into action, so as to make the people prosperous.

Yet they wait for something better before they begin to work. Perhaps this explains their unemployment. In the third instance, they are blind to Chinese conditions. It is true that many returned students even employ English in their daily life instead of our own language. What a lamentable state of things! Can these students fit for China? Again, people who achieve success are of three kinds: those who wait for opportunities, those who seek opportunities, and those who create opportunities. The first kind is of rare occurrence, while the second and third are many. Returned students, as members of the best class in the entire community, are at least in a position to utilise the opportunity if not to seek or to create it. If they really have acquired a first-hand practical knowledge along with their college training, however poor China is, they have the chance to render a service. But first of all, they must bear in mind that one's ability must be fitted to the job and that one who serves best attains success, whether that service is humble or of great endeavor. It is not difficult to prove this point. Not all the returned students suffer from failure. Many of them have done a great deal for the benefit of the public and some of them even have made their names known to the world. Is not the same chance available for the rest? Therefore, we can see that it is the student himself who achieves success, but not education nor a prosperous situation.

The above statement is simply an additional explanation of the failure of the returned students to Mr. Fong's opinion and with a hope that the returned students and those still studying abroad will change their attitude, that is, to lay stress upon practical knowledge of their chosen line rather than that which comes from the textbooks and classrooms, and adopt themselves to Chinese conditions and requirements. These will surely widen their chances to achieve success one way or the other.

THE CO-ED CONTROVERSY

Editor: THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir: Your correspondence column for the last few days has been pretty well filled with literature regarding co-education. In a certain well-known local college, from what they have written the parties engaged in the controversy seem to be conducting a family warfare for they all are fellow-students of the same institution of learning and concerned themselves rather with what has transpired in the class rooms than with the merits and demerits of the question.

It would be well for the interested parties to settle their points of difference within their college halls instead of going to the foreign press. What has appeared in the press did no credit to their Alma Mater nor add any interest to the busy reading public—certainly not to the foreign community where THE CHINA PRESS enjoys its modest circulation. However, if they feel that they must go to the press to air their grievances against each other then the Chinese newspapers would be a more logical choice since it is the Chinese people particularly the Chinese parents who should naturally be more interested in knowing the facts and the outcome of the quarrel.

A BREAK IN CHINA'S WAR

(New York World)

After weeks of deadlock the war in Northern China has taken a sudden dramatic turn. Wu Pei-fu, best of a bad lot of free-booting army men, and best because in addition to his own ambitions he has represented an actual attempt to unify a badly disunited country, was half-way launched upon an offense against his chief adversary in the north when one of his Generals revolted, seized Peking, and proclaimed his late chief an enemy of China.

Now Wu Pei-fu turns back to strike at Peking, his adversary in the north counter-attacks behind him, and the Japanese, who

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

BY WM. F. KIRK

Our teacher was telling us yesterday about the earth whirling around & around & she said we was all crawling around on this big round earth like little ants. So I was thinking to myself it is kind of funny that when we look up in the sky in the morning we are looking at a different place than we see when we look up in the sky at night.

So last night I asked Pa where is Heaven, & Pa said well, Bobbie, speaking as one with has never been there, said Pa, it is right up there, & Pa pointed over his head.

& this morning I asked Pa where is Heaven & Pa said Bobbie, I told you last night it is right up there.

That is the time I caught you, Pa, I said. You can't be pointing at the same place this morning that you pointed at last night, I said, because the earth has turned half (1/2) way around, I said, & you must be pointing at a different place than what you pointed at last night, & Heaven can't vary well be in both places at once, I said. That is the time I caught you.

Bobbie, said Ma, it is very wrong of you to argue with your dear father about where Heaven is, said Ma. He may be wrong, said Ma, because he used to tell me Heaven was in my eyes, said Ma, & he proudly told the saint story to other girls before he met me, said Ma, but I will tell you, Bobbie, said Ma, Heaven is not something which we can point at or go to by train or auto-mobil, said Ma, it is beyond distance and beyond what you may be sure, Bobbie, said Ma, that there is a Heaven somewhere, Ma said.

I don't mind believing that, I said, it is kind of fun believing there is a Heaven, but it ain't no fun believing there is a Perry-tory, I said. I don't like to think about getting roasted on a bonfire after I die, I said.

You must be a good boy, then, Bobbie, said Ma. & you must use slang or bad words. Do you know what happens to little boys that use coarse words, Bobbie? said Ma.

No, I said, do you know? Yes, Bobbie, said Ma. If you use slang & bad words you will Parish sum day & Satan will see you & he will stick a stick thru you & roast you in a fire, said Ma. Would he do that to little boys just for using slang & coarse words? I said.

Yes, said Ma. The dirty old bum, I said. Why, Bobbie! said Ma. I am surprised to hear such language. Stop talking, said Ma to Pa. But Pa kept laughing, I guess I must be getting kind of clever if I can say things that make people laugh that hard, I will now end this essay by closing.

"You might have straight or curly hair, Your eyes might be deep brown or gray; If you were Nordic I'd not care, Though Nordic blood is best, they say; You might have talents such as those That men who conquer must possess, But please don't let yourself suppose I'd be affected more or less."

"You might be famous or obscure, Or have such wealth as Ford has won; You might be naughty or as pure As any man beneath the sun; Your first name might be Fritz or Jake, Your bloops might be great or small, But all that, be assured, would make No difference to me at all."

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

French Golf Enthusiasts Set the Fashion of Wearing Purse On Leather Belt Over Sport Sweater.

An interesting chapter or two in the history of costumes might be written about the various devices men and women, in other lands and other times, have had for carrying their money. In the middle ages when sleeves reached such a prodigious length that they had to be tied in knots to keep them from trailing in the mud or dust, it was customary for men as well as women to keep their money in the ends of their sleeves. The Japanese lady keeps her fan, purse and other such accessories in the sleeves of her kimono. The Persian keeps his purse as well as his dagger and writing implements thrust through his wide girdle. The device of the modern woman seems to be to carry her money in a handbag—an arrangement that has many disadvantages, but the compensating advantage from the point of view of fashion in her present mood, that a handbag in no wise detracts from the slender silhouette. Pockets that really hold things would be out of the question.

Do you remember the Arabian Nights story in which a rope-maker named Hassan, puts his treasure in a bag, keeping in the folds of his turban? And those familiar with Oriental customs tell us that turbans are not infrequently used even now as a repository for money and other precious possessions. Who knows but that in the constant changes of fashions we too may adopt the custom of making purses of our turbans or hats?

One thing is certain, and that is that the handbag is ill adapted to the requirements of the sportswoman. Every tennis player of the feminine gender has been confronted with the problem of finding a place to keep her purse. French sportswomen sometimes wear leather belts from which are suspended little purses, and this seems to be a trick worth adopting on this side of the Atlantic. The belt slips through narrow slides on the side of the slip-on sweater and the bag is of fringed suede leather.

FURS YOU KNOW

The Mole

Though mole is one of the least durable of all furs, and one of the smallest, there is a steady demand for mole-skin coats, and the fur is used as mole-skin for making collars and otherwise trimming coats and frocks. An authority on fur manufacturing says that between three hundred and fifty and four hundred skins are used in making one coat, consequently an enormous amount of labor is entailed in the making, a fact which has much to do with the persons are not aware is that while moles are found in this country, and almost every country of Europe, it is only in Holland and Scotland that the great majority of mole furs are secured, and the good ones practically all come from Scotland. The trouble with the American moles seems to be that they are very short-furred, and that even when carefully dyed they show unattractive spotting.

German Savant Relates To An Expectant World
Facts Of Gold 'Miracle'Dr. Miethe Is Convinced That Dream Of Alchemists Has Come True In His Test
With QuicksilverBY DR. ADOLPH MIETHE
Professor of Physics, Charlottenburg Technical School, Berlin

In the early part of April of this year, with my assistant, Dr. H. H. Stammerich, I succeeded in accomplishing the disintegration of the mercury atom. I speak exclusively of the disintegration and not the residue, in order not to publish anything prematurely which at the present time remains obscure in my experiment. One component of the disintegrated quicksilver atom was obtained in computable amount by analysis. It showed .01 to .10 of a milligram of gold.

Because of the incredibility of our finding and in accordance with prevailing technique in presenting such matter, we are forced at this time to content ourselves with establishing the one fact of obtaining gold beyond all doubt. After three months of research, because of the tediousness of performing a single experiment, and by reason of lack of materials and assistance, we are able to give only a preliminary, instead of a complete discussion of our work. For obvious reasons, we do not wish to delay publication longer.

For many years I have been concerned with the recoloration of transparent minerals and glasses through the action of long-waved ultra-violet rays. For this experiment the usual quicksilver lamps were used. I became acquainted in June, 1923, with a new quicksilver lamp, prepared by A. Jaenicke, which yields a brighter and more constant field of the spectrum, and which I welcomed in my research. The electrode material of this lamp communicates with the air. Upon examining the emissions of the Jaenicke lamp with Mr. Stammerich more closely in the first months of 1924 we found a thing which had not escaped the notice of the inventor of the lamp. The emissions of the lamp under increased voltage change rapidly and form a black inner coating, so that the ultra-violet intensity is lost. We conjectured that the mercury was rendered impure by materials included in the current. Mr. Jaenicke told us that upon distilling the mercury from old lamps he had found residues whose chemical nature he was unable to ascertain. He put similar residues at our disposal for further examination and has aided us most unselfishly in our researches.

Upon analyzing about 0.5 grams of residue, taken from about five kilograms of quicksilver from the lamp, we found in the amalgam-like mass, among other impurities, gold. Ten years ago this would hardly have evoked any curiosity. It would have appeared that the gold had been contained in the mercury, in spite of Jaenicke's contention that the mercury to begin with had been twice distilled. At that time the possibility of the transmutation of one element into another was relegated to the scrapheap of mistaken ideas. Today we do not dare to pass this discovery by. One can write the following equations:  $Hg (cr 201-H) (4) = Au (cr 197)$   $Hg (cr 204-H) (1) = Au (cr 197)$  [3g is the symbol for quicksilver, Au the symbol for gold.] Nevertheless, it did not seem impossible that mercury, whose atomic weight is so near that of the radio-active substances, might be disintegrated under certain circumstances, at that time unknown. There were various interpretations which up to the present time have not been contested. The comparatively low voltage and concentration of energy in a quicksilver arc appear entirely insufficient to make the process even believable. On the other hand, there is nothing to combat the fact that mercury under favorable conditions can be changed from a normally metastable substance to a labile substance.

She Thought Smoking
Verboten in U. S.

LADY CHAYLESMORE

Lady Chaylesmore, an American by birth, thought smoking had been added to other prohibitions in America when she landed in New York from the liner Arabia, on her way to Montreal. She stopped to the pier with a lighted cigarette, which she was instantly ordered to throw away. Later she learned the regulation was restricted by the Fire Department to the pier.

numerous experiments was this: the mercury atom can be disintegrated.

The chosen method of experimentation was the following: The lamps used have in common the fact that the positive pole communicates with the air. This insures an efficient energy, which can be raised by surcharge, and which is not influenced by the diameter of the tube. In successful experiments we always worked with a tension of 170 volts at the electrodes. In accordance with laws laid down for the experiment we used lamps ranging in power from 400 to 2,000 watts. The current was used for a length of time ranging from 20 to 200 hours.

Without further closer observation we may accept this fact: The formation of gold necessitates a certain minimum of tension and potential gradient. The fact in harmony with this is that we found no trace of gold in quicksilver lamps that had been used for a length of time.

With the percentage of formed gold always minimum it was necessary to adopt more stringent safeguards against error to keep the discovered fact above suspicion. For this reason the same amount of quicksilver for the lamp was analyzed every time. It was shown that the current conductors were free of gold. The quicksilver, later used in the decisive experiments, showed upon the analysis of K. A. Hoffman, to be free of gold, as did ours. Also the extremely refined analytical methods completed by Haber, which he permitted us to use in our work, showed no gold. After the completion of the experiment this mercury, free from gold to begin with, showed the usual amount of gold.

METAL IS MALLEABLE

The gold found in the quicksilver remaining following the vacuum distillation, was ascertained in this wise: The metal remaining in the nitric acid after the last solution was yellow, composed of an agglomerate of well formed mirror-surfaced, cube-shaped crystals. The metal remaining after the volatilization of the quicksilver at red heat was remodeled, after treating it with nitric acid, of grape-shaped crusts, bright gold in color. In both cases the metal was malleable and showed the gold streak. It showed the well known gold color when the polished film was observed by doubly reflected light. The solution in aqua regia was simple and yielded, upon volatilization of the solution, crystals of primary form, which the same amount of solution of natural gold yielded.

We were unable to complete the experiment for ascertaining the atomic weight. These proofs are, in all probability, difficult but of the highest theoretic importance. That the discovery of the disintegration of the quicksilver atom has no economic significance cannot be said. Every thought in this direction is a bold one.

A number of unexplained phenomena which we noted are still being pursued. We are on the brink of a complex discovery. Naturally, we cannot voice the plea that the continuation of these experiments be left entirely to us.

CHECK BEING MADE HERE

The physics department of New York University, in collaboration with "The Scientific American," is at this time engaged in checking, through different experiments, the alleged findings of the German professor. New York scientists, while not challenging the theoretical truth of the transmutation of elements, have expressed their doubts that quicksilver, without a staggering concentration of energy, could be transformed into gold. The concentration of energy in the quicksilver lamp used by Dr. Miethe, is not particularly high. Its voltage is around 200. American scientists are deeply interested in the Miethe experiments, but point out their readiness to accept Dr. Miethe's findings only after the most rigorous tests. They accept transmutation as a fact accomplishable with the lighter elements; they accept its theoretical truth with respect to all elements. They are skeptical, however, of the transmutation of quicksilver into gold at comparatively low pressure, and will remain so until the Miethe findings have been authenticated.

HONAN LAND OF CONFUSION NOW;
SCHOOLS CLOSEDRailway Service Is Entirely
Deranged By Movements
Of Many Troops

(China Press Correspondence)
Kaileng, Dec. 18.—Confusion worse confounded tells the condition in Honan. Last Friday General Hu Ching-yi, the new Tuli, made his formal entry with twenty thousand troops and more trainloads of troops are arriving daily. Looting is not now feared but worse things are anticipated because of the fact that more troops are being called for instead of being sent home as was expected.

No regular trains have run to or from Kaileng for over two weeks and the mails are deranged. Some Americans here due to take furlough had to be furnished a special train to Hanchow at the order of the new Tuli.

Schools are all closed and most students have gone home leaving others to mourn over the fact that there are no more trains.

Chengtu Notes

(Independent News Service)
Chengtu, Szechuen, Dec. 2.—Owing to lack of funds to carry on the government schools in the province, Civil Governor Teng Hsi-hou, it is learned, has made a request to General Yang Sen, the military governor of Szechuen, for $30,000. The civil governor is said to have suggested that this amount, which will be spent exclusively for educational purposes, be obtained from salt revenues.

On account of lack of funds to maintain his staff of officers, Mr. Sun Yuan-tsin, the Chienchang Taoyun, has wired to the civil governor, Teng Hsi-hou, resigning from his office.

It is reported on good authority that the police office here will shortly collect a special tax from the people for the purpose of raising funds to carry out public sanitation work in the city. It is understood that large waste boxes will be provided on all new streets that have been just completed.

On account of crop failures which resulted from drought, the price of rice and grain in Jenchow, a town not far from here, has become shocking. The inhabitants there are reported to be finding it very difficult to secure enough food, and many of the poor will starve if relief is not sent quickly.
